Simply put, wire weaving is just looping thin wire around a heavy wire frame in a pattern. What changes is how many times you loop the thin weaving wire around one base wire before looping it onto another base wire. The weaving wire can be brought over or under the base wires in any pattern you like.

In traditional hand weaving the pile is formed by using a metal rod or wire that can be inserted in the shed. When the rod or wire is taken out afterward, the pile ends will form loops that will remain in the weave. Of course, you could use any rod for the pile weave such as chopsticks, dowel rod or knitting needle.
