Glow by Ned Beaman - Goodreads

Ned Beaman is a quirky, inventive writer. He writes with an immediacy, a sense of playfulness. Much of his material is quite surreal and ever-so-stylised. So with Glow, we find ourselves in a pastiche of an urban lad-lit novel.

You won't understand the seemingly illogical jump from the first sentence to the second until you read Ned Beaman's alarmingly addictive, gloriously gonzo, and immaculately impassioned third novel, Glow. Fine as his first two books were, this outing represents a new pinnacle of accomplishment for the author.

Glow - The Barnes & Noble Review

Glow is an inventive, supercharged conspiracy thriller set in contemporary London with occasional forays to Burma and Iceland... Beaman is an admirably lean storyteller and the acrobatic plot flips time zones and swaps points of view with the frantic, fierce pace of a computer game.
