Storms of Silence initially left me wondering what I had let myself in for. However the more I read the more I respected his honesty and openness and courage for saying so many thing in print that I would only ever discuss with the most trusted of friends. At times its not an easy read, but ultimately it resonates because it is true.

One thing that makes these storms feel even worse is that God seems to be quiet during the most intense parts of the storms. Everything may be raging around us and we cry out to God in frustration or despair—and our prayers are met with deafening silence. Silence is distressing. Silence is disturbing. It feels like God has turned His back on us.
